Other comments or suggestions:

The literature review covers the aspects of social media, online advertising, and their role in online consumer behaviour and decision-making, with a particular focus on Turkey. The list of references contains 70 items. However, some of them (e.g. Turgut, 2006; Turanci, 2019) are never cited in the text, which is a shortcoming. Chapters four and five have titles different from those in the thesis template.

The practical part is a survey among 302 respondents in Aydin, Turkey. The author calculated descriptive statistics and factor analysis and tested two statistical hypotheses. The results are interpreted and discussed. The text formatting is incorrect on several pages and contains numerous typos and grammar mistakes. VIF is an indicator used to detect multicollinearity, not multiconnection, as stated on p. 40.

I recommend the thesis for the final defence.

Plagiarism control: The system Theses.cz found similarities in the thesis. The thesis needs to be manually reviewed. After a manual check the file was not assessed as plagiarism.
