Partial Comments and Suggestions

The strategic control is very important, especially that the organizations are currently facing a changeable environment constantly, either as an internal or external environment. The success of an organization is not considered as a guarantee to futuristic success which leads to a difficulty in controlling and strategic assessment in these days. The problem of the research is to find out if the concept of strategic control has obtained the interests up to date hospitals in United Arab Emirates (Al Noor hospital in particular). The results show us that the strategic control process is efficient and effective and proper measuring techniques are used for assessing the performance. However, there was some room for improvements so some recommendations were made.
