Cycle	Attending	Shopping/other activity?	Please specify	Number	Text
0	0	0	-	5	Strongly Negative	I remember the you stink national protest that took place in august 2015.. i was there. Almost Everyone i knew was there. There was a sense of solidarity and hope . Now i passby and i think "what a shame". Its a ghost town
0	1	0	-	1	Strongly Positive	i remember walking through the square on a Sunday morning and feeling the impact of peace and war on the city. The square shows me that people can survive the evils of war and that life goes on
1	1	0	-	-	-	I've been there a few times but I can't recall a vivid memory, I guess I'm indifferent about it.
0	1	1	-	5	Strongly Negative	I have a strong in Martyr square, when the #YOUSTINK movement was very active, and I was there with hundreds of people protesting agains the trash crisis and the corrupt government. We were there many times, and one of those time, the police threw tear gas at us, and they were shooting in the sky. In my opinion, the square is a colonised place by investors, corrupt political leader, tailored for the rich. The Najmeh square was for a long period of time, inaccessible for Lebanese citizen, and only open for tourists. It was a government strategy to hinder political activism in "public spaces". Now, it is just a place for parking lots, and commercial events. A vivid memory would be the riots we used to have around 10 years ago and it reminds of how much we were ignornat in just going with the flow and rioting to politicians we dont even want for falsified love of the sect it reminds me of how much we as lebanese people have been played with
0	1	0	-	1	Strongly Positive	"You stink" protests - Symbolic of fighting against oppression however the land-grabbing practices of Solidere have ruined the space and its potential functionality
0	1	0	-	5	Strongly Negative	Big parking spot. Feels like a wasted space
1	1	1	-	4	Negative	I remember being pulled over by the cops when I was busking there.
1	0	0	-	2	Positive	I attended several marches/manifestations there, one of the biggest was the "to3et ri7etkon" one that I was a part of on several days This made it now a sign of the Lebanese people's solidarity in times of need.
0	1	1	-	2	Positive	-
0	1	0	-	-	-	-
0	0	0	-	4	Negative	March 14 2005, it gave me kind of hope(false hope as I realized later)
0	0	0	-	3	Neutral	On our last day of school we all went there and ordered McDonalds for 200 people. Other than this, no memories at all.
0	0	0	-	3	Neutral	It is sad to me. Solidere in general today is a no man's land. We here stories of how it used to be the heart of beirut full of energy and dynamic activities. Now, history is erased, only luxurious emptybuildings are build everywhere, following facadism. Squares should be central and a meeting point for people. Public spaces in solidere are all closed for public for security issues as they tell us. This square is left alone. I wish it becomes an open space like before so that it witnesses life again.
1	1	0	-	-	-	No memory at all , it doesnt mean anything
0	0	0	-	-	-	It was a music event during Beirut music festival. I spent that night with some friends and it was a joyous evening. The square mostly reminds me of that evening. But it, as well, throws me back to school days and Lebanese history classes, with some facts about Lebanese independence. It renders a nostalgic feeling.
0	1	0	-	2	Positive

0	0	0	-	3	Neutral	Revolution
0	1	0	-	-	-	Used to work around that area ..
0	1	0	Drink	4	Negative	I mostly remember protests. The square now mostly feels like a graveyard of promises.
0	1	0	-	-	-	It doesn't mean much
0	1	0	-	5	Strongly h	Avoiding downtown ever since the 2015 protests. I feel anxious there Protest of 2015 It was mostly in riad al solh Late night drawing on the pavement with a friend As for the square, mostly the martyr's statue has always been of a wonder to me since I was a kid. As you know not many squares in Lebanon hold a historical statue in the middle. And having that one square with a statue, and it's all torned up by bullets...
1	1	1	-	3	Neutral	It doesn't mean anything to me. I remember the protests years ago and the slogan "la lil tamdeed"
1	1	1	-	3	Neutral	Protesting around it; that the protests didn't mean anything
0	1	0	-	5	Strongly h	Really trashy and loud event with overpitched loud music blasting over small snack stands
0	0	0	-	4	Negative	The square means rhe heart of Beirut that uses to be green and full of life
0	0	0	-	5	Strongly h	Not much memories. It's a shame the main junction of the city is mainly for cars and parking spaces
0	0	0	-	5	Strongly h	when it comes to mind, Martyrs' square reminds me of the political trash in the country and of how it became an area for political leverage between 2005 and 2010
1	0	0	Just sit and admire the green	5	Strongly h	Destroyed buildings in a distance, civil war memory
0	1	0	-	2	Positive
0	1	1	-	-	-	Gathering for xmas celebrations which was nice but not for long somehow the place feels out of place! I love the monuments they discovered near it.
0	1	0	-	-	-	Watching skaters. It is the broken down statue of a country that is failed. It has been appropriated by almost all political pseudomovements, which have led to no palpable change, and even further distort the meaning of the word martyr. During terrorist attacks, and we have had many, Lebanese media/politicians constantly refer to victims of terrorists attacks as martyrs. Martyrs choose to die for a cause. Victims have no choice. It is a site of political fetishism and appropriation.

0	0	0	Chill in the car and listen to s	1	Strongly p	I met the love of my life there
1	0	0	-	1	Strongly p	There was a protest there for the situation in Venezuela and the whole Venezuelan community came together and the tight bonding of the event with such strong feelings will always be linked to the square
0	1	1	-	-	-	When I was young, around 7 years old, we used to go to Martyr's Sqaure at night and it would be full of people and foreigners. I used to have my drawing sketch book and pencil with me. I used to sit facing the Clock Tower in the square and draw it.
0	1	0	-	-	-	None
0	1	1	-	-	-	The only thing I remember when you say martyrs square is protests and people marching trying to make their voices heard
0	1	1	-	-	-	I remember waving the lebanese flag in martyr's square in 2010 and feeling lots of pride and belonging. Nowadays I'm mostly indifferent to the square and, while I enjoy the improved landscaping there, I feel it's getting more and more dwarfed out by the large buildings surrounding it.

0	1	0	-	-	-	venezuelan protest. the only time i've been to martyrs square was for a protest against maduro. it was a wonderful experience, but nothing related to the square.

0	1	1	-	-	-	-
0	0	0	-	3	Neutral	It is just a landmark where I pass by on my way to other places.
1	1	1	-	1	Strongly p	I don't have anything in mind
0	1	0	Underground scene is amazing	1	Strongly p	14 March- happy that I was there , sitting on the tent during the manifestation, enjoying the vue and dreaming about a better lebanon...
0	1	0	-	-	-	Protests.
0	1	0	-	1	Strongly p	History
0	1	0	-	3	Neutral	Protests against the Venezuelan regime are usually held at Martyrs Square and i Have beautiful memories there
0	1	0	-	3	Neutral	I have no idea what/where Martyrs' square is as I haven't been in Lebanon for too long
0	0	0	-	2	Positive	-
0	0	1	-	-	-	Garbage crisis protest Don't have a particular attachment to martyr square
0	1	1	-	5	Strongly n	Nothing much
0	0	0	-	5	Strongly n	I used to work in a rooftop restaurant/lounge right above the square, overlooking it... I remember gunshots slamming into the building right next to us when riots started forming in the square and forces were holding the people back. To me this square is just a place for people to gather whenever they have issues they need to voice out to our government...
0	0	1	-	2	Positive	I have a lot of memories, I used to spend all my time there with my friends. I remember I used to sing there with my band guitarist to attract some women lol
0	1	0	-	5	Strongly n	The strongest one i have is when my dad took me and my sister there prior to the removal of the martyr's statue (which was closer to the sea from its current location). I remember it being such a wide open space where you could see further than you could see now
0	0	0	Do my nails	3	Neutral	I used to have lunch with father back in the day. It doesnt mean much
0	1	1	-	-	-	-
0	1	0	-	2	Positive	No special vivid memory in this place. Just feel a general force of fullness.
0	1	0	-	-	-	The YouStink demonstration against the garbage crisis. And some memories related to the cedar revolution after the assassination of Rafic Hariri (based on images, videos I've seen), that happened when I was not living in Lebanon yet.
0	1	1	-	5	Strongly n	the eery emptiness immediately after the civil war. In my memory, it is a place that represented the center of the city. Not anymore. At this point, it does not mean anything to me.
0	1	0	Drinking	-	-	To be honest i have no memory
0	1	1	-	2	Positive	When I used to go to this area when I was younger in the weekend, and how crowded it was
0	0	0	-	3	Neutral	Used to go there as a child

0	0	0	-	3	Neutral	-
						Attending the largest public demonstration many years ago. The square feels very disconnected to me. It is surrounded by a major vehicular junction and is difficult to grasp in that scale. It feels like it's not meant to be there, or at least it's original potential isn't being used.
0	0	0	Yoga specifically	5	Strongly N	Political gathering
1	1	1	-	-	-	Hariri's death

0	0	0	-	-	-	Christmas tree
0	0	0	-	-	-	I have no memory there
0	0	0	-	3	Neutral	I used to go there alot as a kid. And recently participated in a protest there.
0	0	1	-	2	Positive	I always remember the first time I visited when I was a kid
						My friends and I were sitting on the rocks beside the martyrs' square eating donuts from the nearby dunkin donuts. The view was beautiful, the sea Alamin masjid, and the other ancient looking buildings
1	1	1	-	1	Strongly p	Hariri assasination
0	0	1	-	5	Strongly N	No vivid memory. A place to honor the Martyrs
0	1	0	Eat	-	-	Nothing special
0	0	1	-	-	-	In fact, I have bad memories over there as it reminds me of the 2006 war, since we were waiting for our flight in a place close to the Martyrs' Square.
0	0	1	-	-	-	-
0	1	1	-	-	-	-
						I think my favorite memory is when I was a kid and my dad used to take us to see the Christmas tree. The people would be so happy and i used to get really excited going there.
1	0	1	-	-	-	I mostly remember going to virgin megastore with my father and siblings to get a book at least once or twice a month... the bookstore is right next to the statue at martyr square.
0	0	1	Taking my girls out to a place	-	-	I remember going there during summers as a kid and just marveling at the beautiful stores the streets the old architecture that is been renovated and all the action is happening and watch a square at that time
0	1	1	-	2	Positive	I remember once I had a project related to university.. And it was a good experience to walk and talk to people there related to my project..
0	0	0	-	2	Positive	i remember when rafic hariri died and the whole country went down to protest his death. it feels like the last time the lebanese people agreed to something. when it all turned political and different groups started to protest there, totally killed the vibe for me.
