Ms. Adéla Malinová

Thesis title: Impact of the coronavirus on the economy of developing countries

Ms. Adela Malinová chose a very topical topic

The student focused her thesis on three main goals: The first was to describe and assess the impacts of COVID-19 by sector in selected developing countries (Ethiopia, Zambia, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Moldova, Georgia, and Cambodia). The second objective was to compare these specific impacts, and the third objective was to consider how the coronavirus disease in developing economies has negatively affected developed countries.

Criteria for the selection of these six countries came from the fact the above-mentioned countries were selected by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs CR as priority countries of the CR for cooperation in the period 2018-2023.

The student has built the thesis from the seven operational chapters. particularly from the literature review, objectives of the thesis, methodology, results, discussion, conclusion plus appendix.

On the bases of the collection of data (questionnaires), treatment, and appraisal of data the student created the results and deliverables of the study.

These outputs fully correspond with the objectives and described methodologies that the student used in the thesis.

The chapters on scientific approach and scientific contribution are the final chapters of the thesis, five, six, and seven.

The results are possible to consider as a professional contribution.

The thesis has its own informative ability and importance. From the formal point of view, the thesis has the proper structure, required for this category of theses.

Ms. Adéla Malinová cooperated exemplarily with the supervisor during the diploma thesis preparation.

The thesis written by Ms. Adéla Malinová complies with all formal requirements and I recommend it for defense in front of the faculty state committee.

My final assessment as thesis supervisor is: Excellent
