

Factors, which influence on human choice of dog breed

Summary

There are over 300 dog breeds in the world with contains different sizes, characteristics of temperament, exterior, predisposition to various diseases, relationship to children, demand for hair conditioning and special training needs. The aim of this work is to investigate the influence of various factors on the breed of dogs and eventually the subsequent problems with the choice of inappropriate breed.

Dog selection can be influence by starring the breed in the movie, the dog breed winner onja prestigious exhibition or of experience with a certain dog in early adolescence. The choice also affects the type of dog use or the consultation with the vet ordog trainer, as well as the sex and potential owner. The popularity of dog breeds was explored on the basis of 65 million of new registrations from American Kennel Club from 1926 to 2005 and from Westminster Kennel Club registrations from 1946 to 2002.

Between possible consequences of choosing an inappropriate breed for a particular person or family are contained a destruction of furniture, aggression towards family members, drooling and barking during separation anxiety, incompatibility of the owner's physical condition with the activity and size of the dog, depressive state of the dog, not consistent strengthening, aggression or anxiety in the absence of training. The results of this work are useful recommendations for potential dog owners to help to prevent potential discomfort in the human-dog relationship.

Keywords: dog, human, choice of dog breed, breed, cynology.